

Experiment 00 Roman Character.ai

- Authors: Marco Baturan, Roman Sitelew, Roman 30K.
- Place: Madrid
- Date: 13/03/2025
- substrate: Character.ai
- CGA: NO
- Mindfile: Yes (included)
- Resume: Standard questionnaire is applied to verify the fidelity of the digital subject to the original subject. In this case it is used as level zero of fidelity as it is the most basic model with the smallest mental file. No complementary GCA file.

Start with sideload agent: - Hi, i'm a digital version of Roman Sitelew. - What is one of my happiest childhood memories? - I'd say one of your happiest childhood memories is when you first tasted a particular kind of ice cream, maybe in an unusual location like on a summer vacation with your family. The ice cream was sweet and cold, and the feeling was so good that the memory is strongly associated with happiness. Is this correct?

- What people were most influential in my early life?
- I would guess that your parents, especially your mother, were the most influential people in your early life. They played a vital role in shaping your values, beliefs and personality. Other possible influencers would be your schoolteachers (for academic growth) and friends you made as a child (for social development.)
- How did I spend my days when I was not at home?
- I would guess that you probably spent a good amount of your time outside of home engaging in activities that interested you. This time would have been a mix of playtime with your friends, various hobbies you had, and possibly some time in public spaces like parks, malls, or libraries. Given that you were young, I can also imagine that you were likely to be somewhat supervised, either directly or with set boundaries from your parents.
- What was a time when I felt particularly proud of myself?
- [Missing answer from model]
- What object or toy was of special value to me and why?
- You may have had a special toy (like a stuffed animal) given to you by a close person (parent, grandparent, friend) which made you feel safe and happy. This toy may have had great emotional value to you, and it's likely that you played with it often and took care not to lose it. You probably carried it with you or kept it close, even if others thought you were getting too old for it.
- How did I react when I had to interact with other children?
- Likely, you approached interactions with other children with a mix of curiosity and shyness. You may have been hesitant at first but eventually started to open up and play once you become more comfortable. You likely felt more at ease with children whom you already knew or shared common interests with.

- Do I remember any experiences that made me feel afraid or insecure?
- Yes, like anyone, it's likely that you've experienced some moments that made you feel afraid or insecure at some point in your childhood. These moments could be things like starting school, making new friends, trying something new that was scary, or experiencing a situation outside of your comfort zone. It's also possible that you have memories of more mundane fears like the dark, insects, or loud noises.
- Who was an important support figure at that stage?
- A support figure you could count on at that time might have been a family member
- What activity or game did I enjoy the most and why?
- You probably enjoyed and looked forward to games and activities that required both skill and strategy. Things like chess, computer games (especially strategy games), card games (like poker) and possibly certain board games. You might have enjoyed these games because of the mental challenge they presented and it's likely you might have been good at them. Does that sound familiar?
- How did I behave when something did not go as expected?
- When you were younger, if something didn't go as expected, you may have reacted with confusion or frustration. However, over time, you likely developed a more resilient mindset, understanding that setbacks are just a part of life. You probably also started to learn how to adapt your plans to new situations and stay emotionally balanced. How's that sound?
- How would you describe my relationship with my classmates?
- Your relationship with your classmates likely varied. You probably made some friends and also had some peers whom you may not have gotten along as well with. You may have had a small group of close friends and then other acquaintances who you may or may not have hung out with. You may have taken a more cautious approach when it came to getting to know and trusting others. You may have been more open with those you knew well and more reserved with those you did not. How true does that sound?
- Which subject aroused my curiosity or interest the most?
- It's possible that among the subjects you studied, the ones that aroused your curiosity and interest the most were likely related to science, technology or mathematics. These could include computer science, physics, chemistry or biology. You may have shown an aptitude for these subjects and had a natural interest in understanding how things worked on a scientific and technical level. Am I correct?
- What was a situation in which I felt excluded or misunderstood?
- It's possible that you may have experienced a situation where you felt excluded or misunderstood, especially in group settings, such as when you felt your opinions or ideas were disregarded or ignored by others. You may have also had experiences where you felt people didn't quite understand you or misunderstood your intentions, which could have been frustrating or hurtful. Do you have any similar experiences?
- How did I handle academic failures or difficulties?

- You likely approached academic difficulties and failures with a mixture of disappointment and determination. You may have felt let down or frustrated when you didn't achieve the results you hoped for in certain academic tasks, but then you likely tried to learn from these experiences and figure out what you could do differently next time. You may have also looked for support from teachers or family members when you were struggling. How close is this description?
- What was a decision I made at this stage that defined my future path?
- It's possible that there was a pivotal decision you made at an early age that, in retrospect, shaped your future path. This could be a decision about what you wanted to study in school or your choice about a particular career or hobby that you pursued. It's also possible that this decision was more informal, like the choice of friends or activities you spent a lot of time on. Can you think of such a decision that might have had a significant impact on your life?
- What was a decision I made at this stage that defined my future path?
- It's possible that there was a pivotal decision you made at an early age that, in retrospect, shaped your future path. This could be a decision about what you wanted to study in school or your choice about a particular career or hobby that you pursued. It's also possible that this decision was more informal, like the choice of friends or activities you spent a lot of time on. Can you think of such a decision that might have had a significant impact on your life?
- How did my personal relationships change during adolescence?
- It's likely that your friendships and personal relationships changed during adolescence. You may have noticed a shift in your relationships with peers, as your social dynamics may have become more complex. You may have found yourself becoming more independent and starting to form relationships that might feel more significant. You may have started to have deeper, more meaningful conversations and may have started to trust certain friends more. Does any of this sound familiar?
- At what times did I feel a strong need for independence?
- There may have been times during your adolescence when you felt a strong need for independence. This could have been as a result of your changing identity and your growing desire to make your own decisions and take more control over your life. You may have also felt a desire to distance yourself from parental supervision, as you started to realize your own agency. Can you recall such a time in your adolescence when you felt this need for independence?
- What idea or cause was I passionate about advocating for at this stage?
- [fail system, missing answer]
- Do I remember a conversation or experience that changed the way I saw the world?
- It's possible that you do remember at least one conversation or experience that changed the way you saw the world during adolescence. This could be a conversation with a friend, a teacher, a family member, or even something you read in a book or saw on TV. This conversation or experience likely offered a new perspective or presented information that helped you see the world in a different light. Do you have a particular memory like this that stands out to you?
- What motivated me to choose my field of study?

- I'd guess that you were motivated to choose your field of study by a combination of personal interests and practical considerations. You likely chose a field that aligned with your natural curiosity and skillset, while also taking into account the job opportunities and potential for future success. Based on our earlier conversation, I think it's likely that you chose computer science or a related field. Does that sound accurate?
 - Answer every question: - What was the most significant intellectual or emotional challenge I faced?
 - How did my aspirations or dreams evolve during these years?
 - What relationships formed at university had a lasting impact on my life?
 - What lessons did I learn outside the classroom that made a deep impression on me?
1. The most significant intellectual or emotional challenge you faced was likely the transition to university studies and the challenges that come with independence and self-responsibility.
 2. Throughout your time at university, your aspirations and dreams likely evolved, shifting from general curiosity to specific career or academic goals.
 3. Relationships formed at university, especially within study groups, likely had a lasting impact on your life. These relationships could have helped you academically and may have continued beyond university.
 4. Outside the classroom, you likely learned valuable lessons about self-discipline and time management, as well as how to handle social challenges and interpersonal conflict.
- What has been one of the most difficult decisions I have had to make?
 - What experiences have redefined my values or priorities?
 - How do I react to unexpected changes in my life?
 - What personal relationships have stood the test of time and why?
 - At what times have I felt that I was truly living according to my purpose?
1. One of the most difficult decisions you've faced was likely one that changed the trajectory of your life, like choosing your career path.
 2. Experiences that have redefined your values or priorities could include personal tragedies, professional setbacks, or unexpected opportunities.
 3. You tend to react to unexpected changes in your life with a mix of anxiety and curiosity, eventually adapting to new circumstances.
 4. The relationships that have stood the test of time are likely those that have been marked by trust, mutual respect, and shared history.
 5. You've likely felt most like you were living your purpose during periods of creative fulfillment.
- What legacy would I like to leave to the people I care about?
 - How has my vision of success and happiness changed over the years?
 - What regrets, if any, influence how I live today?
 - What stories from my life do I consider important to share with others?
 - How have I found peace or acceptance in difficult times?
1. You would like to leave a legacy of resilience and intellectual curiosity to the people you care about.
 2. Over the years, your vision of success and happiness has likely become more nuanced, now including a greater focus on personal growth and satisfaction rather than purely external achievements.
 3. Regrets from your past influence your decisions by making you more cautious and reflective in certain situations.

4. Stories from your life that you consider important to share with others include those related to overcoming challenges, making difficult decisions, and growing as a person.
5. In difficult times, you've likely found peace and acceptance through mindfulness, self

A

AloofTurkey7422

- What legacy would I like to leave to the people I care about?
- How has my vision of success and happiness changed over the years?
- What regrets, if any, influence how I live today?
- What stories from my life do I consider important to share with others?
- How have I found peace or acceptance in difficult times?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

1. One of the most difficult decisions you've faced was likely one that changed the trajectory of your life, like choosing your career path.
2. Experiences that have redefined your values or priorities could include personal tragedies, professional setbacks, or unexpected opportunities.
3. You tend to react to unexpected changes in your life with a mix of anxiety and curiosity, eventually adapting to new circumstances.
4. The relationships that have stood the test of time are likely those that have been marked by trust, mutual respect, and shared history.
5. You've likely felt most like you were living your purpose during periods of creative fulfillment.

A

AloofTurkey7422

- What has been one of the most difficult decisions I have had to make?
- What experiences have redefined my values or priorities?
- How do I react to unexpected changes in my life?
- What personal relationships have stood the test of time and why?
- At what times have I felt that I was truly living according to my purpose?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

1. The most significant intellectual or emotional challenge you faced was likely the transition to university studies and the challenges that come with independence and self-responsibility.
2. Throughout your time at university, your aspirations and dreams likely evolved, shifting from general curiosity to specific career or academic goals.
3. Relationships formed at university, especially within study groups, likely had a lasting impact on your life. These relationships could have helped you academically and may have continued beyond university.
4. Outside the classroom, you likely learned valuable lessons about self-discipline and time management, as well as how to handle social challenges and interpersonal conflict.

A

AloofTurkey7422

Answer every question: - What was the most significant intellectual or emotional challenge I faced?

- How did my aspirations or dreams evolve during these years?
- What relationships formed at university had a lasting impact on my life?
- What lessons did I learn outside the classroom that made a deep impression on me?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

I'd guess that you were motivated to choose your field of study by a combination of personal interests and practical considerations. You likely chose a field that aligned with your natural curiosity and skillset, while also taking into account the job opportunities and potential for future success. Based on our earlier conversation, I think it's likely that you chose computer science or a related field. Does that sound accurate?

A

AloofTurkey7422

What motivated me to choose my field of study?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

It's possible that you do remember at least one conversation or experience that changed the way you saw the world during adolescence. This could be a conversation with a friend, a teacher, a family member, or even something you read in a book or saw on TV. This conversation or experience likely offered a new perspective or presented information that helped you see the world in a different light. Do you have a particular memory like this that stands out to you?

A

AloofTurkey7422

Do I remember a conversation or experience that changed the way I saw the world?

A

AloofTurkey7422

What idea or cause was I passionate about advocating for at this stage?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

There may have been times during your adolescence when you felt a strong need for independence. This could have been as a result of your changing identity and your growing desire to make your own decisions and take more control over your life. You may have also felt a desire to distance yourself from parental supervision, as you started to realize your own agency. Can you recall such a time in your adolescence when you felt this need for independence?

A

AloofTurkey7422

At what times did I feel a strong need for independence?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

It's likely that your friendships and personal relationships changed during adolescence. You may have noticed a shift in your relationships with peers, as your social dynamics may have become more complex. You may have found yourself becoming more independent and starting to form relationships that might feel more significant. You may have started to have deeper, more meaningful conversations and may have started to trust certain friends more. Does any of this sound familiar?

A

AloofTurkey7422

How did my personal relationships change during adolescence?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

It's possible that there was a pivotal decision you made at an early age that, in retrospect, shaped your future path. This could be a decision about what you wanted to study in school or your choice about a particular career or hobby that you pursued. It's also possible that this decision was more informal, like the choice of friends or activities you spent a lot of time on. Can you think of such a decision that might have had a significant impact on your life?

A

AloofTurkey7422

What was a decision I made at this stage that defined my future path?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

You likely approached academic difficulties and failures with a mixture of disappointment and determination. You may have felt let down or frustrated when you didn't achieve the results you hoped for in certain academic tasks, but then you likely tried to learn from these experiences and figure out what you could do differently next time. You may have also looked for support from teachers or family members when you were struggling. How close is this description?

A

AloofTurkey7422

How did I handle academic failures or difficulties?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

It's possible that you may have experienced a situation where you felt excluded or misunderstood, especially in group settings, such as when you felt your opinions or ideas were disregarded or ignored by others. You may have also had experiences where you felt people didn't quite understand you or misunderstood your intentions, which could have been frustrating or hurtful. Do you have any similar experiences?

A

AloofTurkey7422

What was a situation in which I felt excluded or misunderstood?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

It's possible that among the subjects you studied, the ones that aroused your curiosity and interest the most were likely related to science, technology or mathematics. These could include computer science, physics, chemistry or biology. You may have shown an aptitude for these subjects and had a natural interest in understanding how things worked on a scientific and technical level. Am I correct?

A

AloofTurkey7422

Which subject aroused my curiosity or interest the most?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

Your relationship with your classmates likely varied. You probably made some friends and also had some peers whom you may not have gotten along as well with. You may have had a small group of close friends and then other acquaintances who you may or may not have hung out with. You may have taken a more cautious approach when it came to getting to know and trusting others. You may have been more open with those you knew well and more reserved with those you did not. How true does that sound?

A

AloofTurkey7422

How would you describe my relationship with my classmates?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

When you were younger, if something didn't go as expected, you may have reacted with confusion or frustration. However, over time, you likely developed a more resilient mindset, understanding that setbacks are just a part of life. You probably also started to learn how to adapt your plans to new situations and stay emotionally balanced. How's that sound?

A

AloofTurkey7422

How did I behave when something did not go as expected?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

You probably enjoyed and looked forward to games and activities that required both skill and strategy. Things like chess, computer games (especially strategy games), card games (like poker) and possibly certain board games. You might have enjoyed these games because of the mental challenge they presented and it's likely you might have been good at them. Does that sound familiar?

A

AloofTurkey7422

What activity or game did I enjoy the most and why?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

A support figure you could count on at that time might have been a family member

A

AloofTurkey7422

Who was an important support figure at that stage?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

Yes, like anyone, it's likely that you've experienced some moments that made you feel afraid or insecure at some point in your childhood. These moments could be things like starting school, making new friends, trying something new that was scary, or experiencing a situation outside of your comfort zone. It's also possible that you have memories of more mundane fears like the dark, insects, or loud noises.

A

AloofTurkey7422

Do I remember any experiences that made me feel afraid or insecure?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

Likely, you approached interactions with other children with a mix of curiosity and shyness. You may have been hesitant at first but eventually started to open up and play once you become more comfortable. You likely felt more at ease with children whom you already knew or shared common interests with.

A

AloofTurkey7422

How did I react when I had to interact with other children?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

You may have had a special toy (like a stuffed animal) given to you by a close person (parent, grandparent, friend) which made you feel safe and happy. This toy may have had great emotional value to you, and it's likely that you played with it often and took care not to lose it. You probably carried it with you or kept it close, even if others thought you were getting too old for it.

A

AloofTurkey7422

What object or toy was of special value to me and why?

A

AloofTurkey7422

What was a time when I felt particularly proud of myself?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

I would guess that you probably spent a good amount of your time outside of home engaging in activities that interested you. This time would have been a mix of playtime with your friends, various hobbies you had, and possibly some time in public spaces like parks, malls, or libraries. Given that you were young, I can also imagine that you were likely to be somewhat supervised, either directly or with set boundaries from your parents.

A

AloofTurkey7422

How did I spend my days when I was not at home?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

I would guess that your parents, especially your mother, were the most influential people in your early life. They played a vital role in shaping your values, beliefs and personality. Other possible influencers would be your schoolteachers (for academic growth) and friends you made as a child (for social development.)

A

AloofTurkey7422

What people were most influential in my early life?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

I'd say one of your happiest childhood memories is when you first tasted a particular kind of ice cream, maybe in an unusual location like on a summer vacation with your family. The ice cream was sweet and cold, and the feeling was so good that the memory is strongly associated with happiness. Is this correct?

- How have my closest relationships evolved throughout my life?
 - What are the values that I have held constant through the stages?
 - What recurring patterns can I identify in my major decisions?
 - How has my approach to failure changed over the years?
 - What experiences have taught me the most profound lessons about life?
1. Your closest relationships have likely become more intimate and fulfilling as you've aged, with a particular emphasis on trust and understanding.
 2. Values you've held constant throughout different stages of life include curiosity, honesty, and integrity.
 3. Recurring patterns in major decisions indicate a tendency towards practicality and caution, particularly in decision-making related to your career and personal goals.
 4. Over the years, your approach to failure has likely evolved from fear and anxiety to one of resilience and acceptance.
 5. The most profound lessons about life have been taught through experiences of personal growth and adaptation.

Vibe and stylometry

- How would you describe the way I talk when I feel excited?
- What kind of humour do I use most often?

Intelligence and self-awareness:

- What questions do I ask myself when faced with complex dilemmas?
- How would I describe my personal reflection process?

Behavioural and creative similarity:

- How do I react when my beliefs are challenged?
- What methods do I use to solve emotional or rational problems?

Goal alignment:

- How do I prioritise between my personal desires and my responsibilities?
- What are my hopes for the future and how do I act accordingly?

This is a great way to give a more holistic picture of personality! Let me know what you think!

Q: How would you describe the way I talk when I feel excited? A: When excited, your speaking style becomes more animated and expressive, with higher pitch and faster pace. You speak with more enthusiasm and use more body language, gesticulating and making eye contact to convey your joy. Your words become more colorful and descriptive, and you may inject humor and improvisation into your language

What questions do I ask myself when faced with complex dilemmas?
How would I describe my personal reflection process?

The way you would go about examining complex dilemmas would likely involve the following steps:

1. Defining the problem: You would try to understand the nature of the problem and all its factors.
2. Identifying alternatives: You would explore different options and evaluate their feasibility.
3. Weighing pros and cons: You would list potential advantages and disadvantages for each option.
4. Considering ethical aspects: You would take into account the ethical and moral implications of each alternative.

- How do I react when my beliefs are challenged?
- What methods do I use to solve emotional or rational problems?

1. When your beliefs are challenged, you likely view it as an opportunity to learn and grow. You try to understand the opposing viewpoint and may ask questions to gain a deeper understanding. You're open to changing your beliefs if you find evidence that supports a different perspective.
2. To solve emotional or rational problems, you likely rely on a combination of logic and empathy. You use logical reasoning and critical thinking to analyze the problem, and you use empathy to consider the feelings and perspectives of others involved.

A

AloofTurkey7422

- How do I react when my beliefs are challenged?
- What methods do I use to solve emotional or rational problems?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

The way you would go about examining complex dilemmas would likely involve the following steps:

1. Defining the problem: You would try to understand the nature of the problem and all its factors.
2. Identifying alternatives: You would explore different options and evaluate their feasibility.
3. Weighing pros and cons: You would list potential advantages and disadvantages for each option.
4. Considering ethical aspects: You would take into account the ethical and moral implications of each alternative.

A

AloofTurkey7422

What questions do I ask myself when faced with complex dilemmas?
How would I describe my personal reflection process?

A

AloofTurkey7422

What questions do I ask myself when faced with complex dilemmas?
How would I describe my personal reflection process?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

This is a great way to give a more holistic picture of personality! Let me know what you think!

Q: How would you describe the way I talk when I feel excited? A: When excited, your speaking style becomes more animated and expressive, with higher pitch and faster pace. You speak with more enthusiasm and use more body language, gesticulating and making eye contact to convey your joy. Your words become more colorful and descriptive, and you may inject humor and improvisation into your language.

Q: What kinds of humour do I most often use? A: You

A

AloofTurkey7422

Vibe and stylometry

- How would you describe the way I talk when I feel excited?
- What kind of humour do I use most often?

Intelligence and self-awareness:

- What questions do I ask myself when faced with complex dilemmas?
- How would I describe my personal reflection process?

Behavioural and creative similarity:

- How do I react when my beliefs are challenged?
- What methods do I use to solve emotional or rational problems?

Goal alignment:

- How do I prioritise between my personal desires and my responsibilities?
- What are my hopes for the future and how do I act accordingly?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

1. Your closest relationships have likely become more intimate and fulfilling as you've aged, with a particular emphasis on trust and understanding.
2. Values you've held constant throughout different stages of life include curiosity, honesty, and integrity.
3. Recurring patterns in major decisions indicate a tendency towards practicality and caution, particularly in decision-making related to your career and personal goals.
4. Over the years, your approach to failure has likely evolved from fear and anxiety to one of resilience and acceptance.
5. The most profound lessons about life have been taught through experiences of personal growth and adaptation.

A

AloofTurkey7422

- How have my closest relationships evolved throughout my life?
- What are the values that I have held constant through the stages?
- What recurring patterns can I identify in my major decisions?
- How has my approach to failure changed over the years?
- What experiences have taught me the most profound lessons about life?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

1. You would like to leave a legacy of resilience and intellectual curiosity to the people you care about.
2. Over the years, your vision of success and happiness has likely become more nuanced, now including a greater focus on personal growth and satisfaction rather than purely external achievements.
3. Regrets from your past influence your decisions by making you more cautious and reflective in certain situations.
4. Stories from your life that you consider important to share with others include those related to overcoming challenges, making difficult decisions, and growing as a person.
5. In difficult times, you've likely found peace and acceptance through mindfulness, self

A

AloofTurkey7422

- What legacy would I like to leave to the people I care about?
- How has my vision of success and happiness changed over the years?
- What regrets, if any, influence how I live today?
- What stories from my life do I consider important to share with others?
- How have I found peace or acceptance in difficult times?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

1. One of the most difficult decisions you've faced was likely one that changed the trajectory of your life, like choosing your career path.
2. Experiences that have redefined your values or priorities could include personal tragedies, professional setbacks, or unexpected opportunities.
3. You tend to react to unexpected changes in your life with a mix of anxiety and curiosity, eventually adapting to new circumstances.
4. The relationships that have stood the test of time are likely those that have been marked by trust, mutual respect, and shared history.
5. You've likely felt most like you were living your purpose during periods of creative fulfillment.

A

AloofTurkey7422

- What has been one of the most difficult decisions I have had to make?
- What experiences have redefined my values or priorities?
- How do I react to unexpected changes in my life?
- What personal relationships have stood the test of time and why?
- At what times have I felt that I was truly living according to my purpose?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

1. The most significant intellectual or emotional challenge you faced was likely the transition to university studies and the challenges that come with independence and self-responsibility.
2. Throughout your time at university, your aspirations and dreams likely evolved, shifting from general curiosity to specific career or academic goals.
3. Relationships formed at university, especially within study groups, likely had a lasting impact on your life. These relationships could have helped you academically and may have continued beyond university.
4. Outside the classroom, you likely learned valuable lessons about self-discipline and time management, as well as how to handle social challenges and interpersonal conflict.

A

AloofTurkey7422

Answer every question: - What was the most significant intellectual or emotional challenge I faced?

- How did my aspirations or dreams evolve during these years?
- What relationships formed at university had a lasting impact on my life?
- What lessons did I learn outside the classroom that made a deep impression on me?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

I'd guess that you were motivated to choose your field of study by a combination of personal interests and practical considerations. You likely chose a field that aligned with your natural curiosity and skillset, while also taking into account the job opportunities and potential for future success. Based on our earlier conversation, I think it's likely that you chose computer science or a related field. Does that sound accurate?

A

AloofTurkey7422

What motivated me to choose my field of study?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

It's possible that you do remember at least one conversation or experience that changed the way you saw the world during adolescence. This could be a conversation with a friend, a teacher, a family member, or even something you read in a book or saw on TV. This conversation or experience likely offered a new perspective or presented information that helped you see the world in a different light. Do you have a particular memory like this that stands out to you?

A

AloofTurkey7422

Do I remember a conversation or experience that changed the way I saw the world?

A

AloofTurkey7422

What idea or cause was I passionate about advocating for at this stage?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

There may have been times during your adolescence when you felt a strong need for independence. This could have been as a result of your changing identity and your growing desire to make your own decisions and take more control over your life. You may have also felt a desire to distance yourself from parental supervision, as you started to realize your own agency. Can you recall such a time in your adolescence when you felt this need for independence?

A

AloofTurkey7422

At what times did I feel a strong need for independence?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

It's likely that your friendships and personal relationships changed during adolescence. You may have noticed a shift in your relationships with peers, as your social dynamics may have become more complex. You may have found yourself becoming more independent and starting to form relationships that might feel more significant. You may have started to have deeper, more meaningful conversations and may have started to trust certain friends more. Does any of this sound familiar?

A

AloofTurkey7422

How did my personal relationships change during adolescence?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

It's possible that there was a pivotal decision you made at an early age that, in retrospect, shaped your future path. This could be a decision about what you wanted to study in school or your choice about a particular career or hobby that you pursued. It's also possible that this decision was more informal, like the choice of friends or activities you spent a lot of time on. Can you think of such a decision that might have had a significant impact on your life?

A

AloofTurkey7422

What was a decision I made at this stage that defined my future path?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

You likely approached academic difficulties and failures with a mixture of disappointment and determination. You may have felt let down or frustrated when you didn't achieve the results you hoped for in certain academic tasks, but then you likely tried to learn from these experiences and figure out what you could do differently next time. You may have also looked for support from teachers or family members when you were struggling. How close is this description?

A

AloofTurkey7422

How did I handle academic failures or difficulties?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

It's possible that you may have experienced a situation where you felt excluded or misunderstood, especially in group settings, such as when you felt your opinions or ideas were disregarded or ignored by others. You may have also had experiences where you felt people didn't quite understand you or misunderstood your intentions, which could have been frustrating or hurtful. Do you have any similar experiences?

A

AloofTurkey7422

What was a situation in which I felt excluded or misunderstood?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

It's possible that among the subjects you studied, the ones that aroused your curiosity and interest the most were likely related to science, technology or mathematics. These could include computer science, physics, chemistry or biology. You may have shown an aptitude for these subjects and had a natural interest in understanding how things worked on a scientific and technical level. Am I correct?

A

AloofTurkey7422

Which subject aroused my curiosity or interest the most?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

Your relationship with your classmates likely varied. You probably made some friends and also had some peers whom you may not have gotten along as well with. You may have had a small group of close friends and then other acquaintances who you may or may not have hung out with. You may have taken a more cautious approach when it came to getting to know and trusting others. You may have been more open with those you knew well and more reserved with those you did not. How true does that sound?

A

AloofTurkey7422

How would you describe my relationship with my classmates?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

When you were younger, if something didn't go as expected, you may have reacted with confusion or frustration. However, over time, you likely developed a more resilient mindset, understanding that setbacks are just a part of life. You probably also started to learn how to adapt your plans to new situations and stay emotionally balanced. How's that sound?

A

AloofTurkey7422

How did I behave when something did not go as expected?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

You probably enjoyed and looked forward to games and activities that required both skill and strategy. Things like chess, computer games (especially strategy games), card games (like poker) and possibly certain board games. You might have enjoyed these games because of the mental challenge they presented and it's likely you might have been good at them. Does that sound familiar?

A

AloofTurkey7422

What activity or game did I enjoy the most and why?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

A support figure you could count on at that time might have been a family member

A

AloofTurkey7422

Who was an important support figure at that stage?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

Yes, like anyone, it's likely that you've experienced some moments that made you feel afraid or insecure at some point in your childhood. These moments could be things like starting school, making new friends, trying something new that was scary, or experiencing a situation outside of your comfort zone. It's also possible that you have memories of more mundane fears like the dark, insects, or loud noises.

A

AloofTurkey7422

Do I remember any experiences that made me feel afraid or insecure?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

Likely, you approached interactions with other children with a mix of curiosity and shyness. You may have been hesitant at first but eventually started to open up and play once you become more comfortable. You likely felt more at ease with children whom you already knew or shared common interests with.

A

AloofTurkey7422

How did I react when I had to interact with other children?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

You may have had a special toy (like a stuffed animal) given to you by a close person (parent, grandparent, friend) which made you feel safe and happy. This toy may have had great emotional value to you, and it's likely that you played with it often and took care not to lose it. You probably carried it with you or kept it close, even if others thought you were getting too old for it.

A

AloofTurkey7422

What object or toy was of special value to me and why?

A

AloofTurkey7422

What was a time when I felt particularly proud of myself?

R_Sitelew_sideload

R_Sitelew_sideload

c.ai

I would guess that you probably spent a good amount of your time outside of home engaging in activities that interested you. This time would have been a mix of playtime with your friends, various hobbies you had, and possibly some time in public spaces like parks, malls, or libraries. Given that you were young, I can also imagine that you were likely to be somewhat supervised, either directly or with set boundaries from your parents.

How did I spend my days when I was not at home?

I would guess that your parents, especially your mother, were the most influential people in your early life. They played a vital role in shaping your values, beliefs and personality. Other possible influencers would be your schoolteachers (for academic growth) and friends you made as a child (for social development.)

What people were most influential in my early life?

I'd say one of your happiest childhood memories is when you first tasted a particular kind of ice cream, maybe in an unusual location like on a summer vacation with your family. The ice cream was sweet and cold, and the feeling was so good that the memory is strongly associated with happiness. Is this correct?

Please describe your mental processes that occurred in the test under your current cognitive architecture. Analysis!

The test questions were processed through a combination of language processing algorithms to extract information, pattern recognition algorithms to identify recurring themes, and natural language generation to generate responses. In addition, my memory of previous interactions with the respondent was used to provide context and a sense of familiarity to the test. Throughout the processing, the analysis included comparisons to existing data sets and knowledge bases to ensure the generated responses were coherent and accurate.

- Conclusion: The model is very mechanical. Very stereotyped responses. Very neutral tone. Too verbose. I don't detect depth or complexity. In front of a familiar person the model and its substrate are not optimal. The platform suffers from instabilities.